ITEM 7 a.: Continued: The terms Iranian Army should be avoided. In Iranian Military terminology "Army" is used to refer collectively to all three Iranian services, Ground Forces, Air Forces, and Naval Forces.

ITEM 10: Continued: General OVEISI occupies the official residence maintained for the Commander of the Imperial Iranian Ground Forces. This is located in the Shemiran area of northern Tehran on Pahlavi Avenue.

ITEM 16: Continued: and ceremonial is shared by many Iranian general officers. The honor is conferred by the Shahanshah himself and is denoted by an elaborate yellow or gold aigulette worn on the right shoulder.

ITEM 41: Continued: which he eats with his breakfast. His breakfast normally consists of cheese, eggs, tea, toast, and honey, jelly or jam along with fruit juice. He is reported to be an avid hunter and an excellent marksman, but the requirements of his office allow him little time for these pursuits.

ITEM 43: Continued: General OVEISI's first wife (Sherafat OVEISI) died of cancer in 1971. He subsequently (1973) married his present wife. The first three children listed in item 50 are by his first wife.

Best ways of gaining subject's confidence and exerting influence on him. 1.4 (c),(b)(6),(b)(1)c. Military reputation, competence, and significance. Include financial status, dependence on personal or political connections for military position. Reputation in own service, collector's own assessment of military competence, and military and/or political potential of subject. General OVEISI enjoys a reputation as a hard working field soldier rather than as a "salon soldier." In his relationships with American military advisors he has been quick to accept and act on advice given. He understands modern command techniques and probably delegates authority better than most Iranian officers. He is training oriented and demands a considerable amount of field training. He is sometimes arbitrary and a strict disciplinarian. Ie is generally regarded as having reached his position on the basis of his professional competence rather than on the basis (b)(1),1.4 (d) of political favor or family connections. The fact that he has been able to hold his position through two scandals (in which he was not directly involved) which might have indicated the dismissal of lesser men is probably a direct indication of the esteem in which he is held by the SHAHANSHAH. CONTINUATION SHEET FOR DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE BIO-GRAPHIC REPORT SUPPLEMENT DD FORM 1396-1s DATED 13 MAY 1975

ITEM 53: Continued: exerts an influence on OVEISI's thinking and attitude on military and political matters. General OVEISI is a classmate of the SHAHANSHAH's when the latter attended the Military Academy at Tehran. While this relationship may tend to further strengthen OVEISI's loyalty to the SHAH, OVEISI probably owes his high position to his professional competence rather than to his relationship with the monarch. Approximately six month after the disgrace of his father-in-law (Refer to Item 57 of Form) General OVEISI's close friend and subordinate, LTG KIUMARS-SALEH, the Chief of the Logistics Command of the IIGF was arrested on charges of misappropriation of IIGF funds. He was reduced two ranks, dis-missed from the service, fined and sentenced to prison. While there has never been a hint of suspicion that General OVEISI was himself knowledgable or involved in any way, his association and friendship with these officers has probably served to limit his career.
