MILITARY INTELLIGENCE SUMMARY (MIS)

PREFACE

The Military Intelligence Summary (MIS), published in eleven volumes, is a synopsis of military intelligence worldwide. Intended to serve as a ready reference, the MIS presents a compilation of intelligence on those forces which contribute to the military security of each country, and on the political and economic factors affecting the country's military capability. Published semiannually, the MIS serves to update other DIA publications.

The intelligence data in the MIS is that available in DIA as of the first day of the month of publication except where otherwise indicated.

Comments and suggestions are invited. These should be addressed to the Defense Intelligence Agency, Washington, D.C. 20301.

A. ~~(C/NOFORN)~~ Political Military Situation

Guatemala is a republic with popularly elected President and legislature. Brig Gen Kjell Laugerud Garcia (Army, Ret), former Minister of National Defense, was inaugurated as President on 1 July 1974 for a four-year term. Although politically inexperienced, President Laugerud has taken tight hold of the reins of government, particularly since an earthquake devastated Guatemala on 4 February 1976. Disaster relief appears to have been well organized, and the country now is on the road to recovery. Internationally, Laugerud generally has supported the United States, although he has been more independent than his predecessor on some questions. Tensions with the United Kingdom over Belize, sporadic for many years, heated up again in the last half of 1975, Guatemala increased its military strength in the Petén region bordering the British colony, and the UK reinforced its defenses in Belize to discourage any untoward move by Guatemala. Since that time, some British units have returned to the United Kingdom, and negotiations over the future of Belize were being resumed between the UK and Guatemala in April 1976.

Guatemala's armed forces are capable of defending the country against invasion by any of its Central American neighbors. They could conduct successful small-scale operations against El Salvador, Honduras, or--provided British elements were not present--Belize. The armed forces are adversely affected by a topheavy senior officer corps, absence of a career program for NCO's, and obsolescent equipment. Officially designated the Army of Guatemala, the armed forces consist almost exclusively of a ground element (popularly called the Guatemalan Army), plus a small Air Force and Navy. The President is titular Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces, with control highly centralized under the Minister of National Defense, who normally is a senior Army officer. The military establishment theoretically is commanded by the Army Chief of Staff. In practice, however, the Minister of National Defense tends to communicate directly with the Chiefs of the Air Force and Navy. The armed forces are generally pro-West, particularly pro-United States, and have experienced no significant Communist penetration. Their public image, although poor in the past, has been generally improving because of increased emphasis on professionalism and participation in civic action projects. Currently, because of disaster relief activities, the armed forces enjoy a particularly good public image.
